Neighborhood News, Winter Edition

The community garden finished its best season yet. Volunteers harvested more than four hundred pounds of vegetables, and most of it went to the food pantry on Second Street. Plots for next year open for sign-up in February. The garden committee is looking for two new members who can help plan the spring planting and organize the tool shed. The community garden finished its best season yet. Volunteers harvested more than four hundred pounds of vegetables, and most of it went to the food pantry on Second Street. Plots for next year open for sign-up in February. The garden committee is looking for two new members who can help plan the spring planting and organize the tool shed.

The library will extend its hours on Thursdays starting in January. Evening hours will run until eight o'clock, and the reading room will host a homework club for students in grades four through eight. Parents are welcome to stay. The library also needs volunteers to shelve returned books on weekend mornings. The library will extend its hours on Thursdays starting in January. Evening hours will run until eight o'clock, and the reading room will host a homework club for students in grades four through eight. Parents are welcome to stay. The library also needs volunteers to shelve returned books on weekend mornings.